To Whom It May Concern

This letter aims to highlight our past experiences with Algeo's eLearning process and benefit.

The Philippines has enjoyed unprecedented economic growth rate and development in the recent years. This has led to the growing need to hire fresh graduates, however, there has been a need to hasten the knowledge acquisition of our graduates in specific areas of knowledge. We looked at the benefits of Algeo's eLearning program and realized that based on their approach and methodology, students have achieved a much higher understanding of the subject and are better equipped with the demands of industry.

The Department of Trade and Industry (DTI) was looking for talented individuals to enhance our human capital at the technology department in areas such as Networking, Programming and Financial Services as well as increasing knowledge internally with courses in MS Office, Communications and Effective Collaboration. We interviewed several graduates from universities who completed Algeo's eLearning curriculum and found that they had much better understanding of the subject matter than those who did not complete the courses. In further examining the depth and quality of the courses from Algeo, we determined that they were more detailed and robust in the specific areas of interest. Another benefit that we saw in Algeo's curriculum was that it has the flexibility to be configured based on our near-future training plans.

As the need for knowledgeable resources increases, and new technologies emerge in the Philippines, we are looking to companies like Algeo to help in enhancing the skills of our people not only at DTI but also to meet the industry demands.

I highly recommend the eLearning curriculum from Algeo and would prefer to hire resources who have completed their courses.
